Sophia Curry has decades of litigation experience, an instinct for issue-spotting, and is a relentless advocate in high-stakes insurance defense cases.

Sophia started her career as a legal secretary and worked her way through law school while holding a full-time position in a law firm. That foundation gave her insight into the full lifecycle of litigation.

Sophia's litigation background includes criminal defense, family law, civil matters, and federal court cases. She has tried high-stakes cases on both sides of the courtroom, most recently as an Assistant Prosecuting Attorney managing felony dockets in Michigan's 22nd Circuit Court. This perspective allows her to anticipate opposing strategies and build defenses that hold up under pressure.

In her current role, Sophia handles a variety of insurance defense matters. She approaches each case with a deep commitment to preparation, starting with a client conversation and rigorous document review. Her method centers on identifying legal vulnerabilities early and asking the hard questions.

Sophia thrives in trial, with a reputation for connecting with jurors and making complex issues accessible. She operates with integrity, keeps her clients informed at every step, and maintains a standard of readiness that helps avoid surprises in court.

She holds a J.D. from Thomas M. Cooley Law School and a B.S. from Cornerstone University. She maintains active involvement in several bar associations, including those focused on diversity in the legal profession.

Outside of the office, Sophia enjoys shopping, hosting family gatherings, and supporting Port Huron's Art on the River. Her personal motto, "She believed it and she achieved it," reflects the resilience and discipline that define her career and character.
